Born Barbara Ann Gracey on December 29, 1947 in Nolan, Texas to George Howard Gracey of Caddo, Texas, and Annie Viola Nachlinger of Hermleigh, Texas, the family soon moved to Snyder, Texas, where she was raised. Following graduation from Snyder High School, she received in 1969 a bachelor's degree in Home Economics from Texas Tech University, Lubbock, her beautiful sense of style with bright colors and a collection of antiques from around the world.

In 1994 she moved to and settled in Austin, Texas, where she formed her business management consulting company, Maximize, helping small businesses thrive with guidance on hiring and best management practices based on assessments of individuals' strengths and personality styles. Barbara also ran a small business networking group, CEO Network of Austin, where she was widely recognized as a leader in the community.

She had many different titles on her business cards over the years, but her final and favorite was simply: Barbara Metzger, Wise Woman. Her final project was the writing and publishing of her book Support For Cancer, for Friends and Family: 103 Real Things To Do by Barbara Metzger, soon to be available for purchase on Amazon.
