

Joseph Ben-Ur

March 3, 1940 - May 7, 2023

In Loving Memory of Joseph Ben-Ur

Dr. Joseph Ben-Ur was born in Baghdad, Iraq, on March 3, 1940, the son of Moshe and Flora Kiflawi (Yehuda), and passed away on May 7, 2023.

He was a full professor and much-loved mentor at the University of Houston at Victoria (UHV), where he served 23 years as professor and twice as president of the Faculty Senate. Always looking out for the best interests of all his colleagues, students, and community, Joseph received the UHV Distinguished Faculty Service Award and was named the fourth Professor Emeritus of the university. Then-UHV-President Bob Glenn said, "His work has made a lasting impact on our university."

He earned a Bachelor of Arts in economics and Master of Business Administration at Hebrew University and Doctor of Philosophy in marketing, with research on buyer-seller relationships, at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He published scholarly articles in political marketing, chaired sessions in international conferences, and was a senior editor for the Journal of Political Marketing.

Joseph had a keen curiosity about the world and loved to share it. Within a few years of his family's move to Israel at age 10, he and his brother Abe pursued a decade-long passion for designing and building free-flight model aircraft for national competitions and world championships; Joseph mentored many aero modelers older than himself along the way. He studied physics and mathematics before focusing on economics and marketing. And Joseph sparked delightful adventures with his daughters and granddaughters-from soda-can-propeller-boat science fair projects and everyday paper airplanes, to "the car will decide the direction" drives, to stories from his Iraqi-Jewish childhood. These formative experiences will be missed and remembered.

Joseph is survived by his loving wife of 53 years, Tamar (Levav); daughters Nurit and Ela Ben-Ur; granddaughters Maia and Dalia Katz; brother Abe Karem; and many nieces and nephews. He is preceded by his brothers Isaac and Jacob Kiflawi.

Joseph and I traveled the world together speaking about the exciting world of Politics in our capacities as Professors of Marketing. I met Joseph as a fellow PhD student at the University of Illinois in 1975, and that started a lifelong friendship that brought our two families together on many beautiful occasions. I remember well the great dinner parties at Joseph and Tamar's house where they grilled wonderful Laban's and rice that was my source of home-cooked foods as a single man, loving being part of their family gatherings with their two beautiful daughters. Joseph remained one of my best friends for life, as we worked together at two different universities and had wonderful times together, eating wonderful food in Milwaukee and Chicago restaurants, and engaged in deep conversations about every imaginable topic under the sun. Joseph was funny, brilliant, engaging, and knowledgeable about many topics in life. Most importantly, he was a loyal friend who was always watching my back in well over 20 different countries where we participated in conferences on the topic of Political Marketing. Perhaps the most exciting trip was my one and only trip to Israel with Joseph and a colleague to visit Jerusalem. I learned a lot from Joseph, and loved being with him and just hanging out together. He always shared his most personal feelings and thoughts about life, as I did with him, and I gleaned much wisdom from him about raising children. He will be missed greatly by me and my wife, Judy, and we wish the whole Ben-Ur family much peace and strength during this difficult period. G-d blessed you all with a gem of a human being, and I know anyone who knew him loved him.

“ I’ve known the Ben-Ur family for more than 40 years. I remember Dr. Ben-Ur as a kind person who was happy to welcome me into his home during my summer visits over many years. The last time I saw him at Ela’s wedding I was struck by how proud he was of his daughter and family, his joy was palpable. I am thankful to have had the chance to know him. May his memory be a blessing.

Dear Ela and the Ben-Ur family, I'm really sorry for your loss. I was one of Joseph's political marketing buddies. I remember him for his immense fun, quiet insights, and wisdom. On one occasion at a political marketing conference in Romania, he and I went for a walk out of a restaurant where our colleagues were congregated. I cannot remember why we left, but when we were on our way back we were confronted by a family of brown bears: papa, mama, and two baby bears. I was babbling as we were talking up the hill and he just looked at me and said "shhhhh! Look ahead, don't move a muscle. Just wait!" He was so cool about it. Neither scared nor complacent. I was looking for somewhere to run I have to say! Afterwards, we joked about it, but it was pretty hair-raising. So I think Joe may have saved me from a mauling there. Wonderful man, we will miss him dearly in the political marketing community.

I only met Joseph once. He was visiting his brother, Itzak, whose son had married our daughter. There was a special showing of a film about the exodus of Jews from Arab countries and we had arranged to go with Itzak.

I was sitting next to Joseph when a couple of strangers sat in the empty seats beside me. One of them asked if I was Iraqi. I said no but that my neighbor was from Baghdad. They said that they knew Baghdad but they had actually lived in Kilis. I then swapped places with Joseph. When he told them the original family name, they knew it well. His ancestors had been the guardians of the tomb of Ezekiel. The two families had known each other well. They were excited to meet Joseph and, long after the film had ended, the three of them were still talking to each other.

They would never forget their brief encounter with Joseph and neither would my wife and I, such was his charisma.

Dear Paul and Solomon, thank you so, so much for these tributes—and especially these delightful anecdotes! It's magical having new windows into moments in my father's life.

They came in as comments rather than posts so I can't reply directly but hope you get notified of my reply here. Thank you so much again!
