“ When my mom moved into the Pavilion in June, it was a very hard time. My mom started crying as she left the dining room table to go to her new room. As she left, I also burst into tears. It had been some of the hardest 5 days of my life as we moved my mom from Houston to Austin. Marvin came over and took my hands in his and said everything was going to be alright. My mom would learn to like her new home. I just needed to give it a few weeks. What a comfort to have someone like Marvin to understand how I was feeling and say some words of hope. After that, whenever I saw Marvin at the Pavilion, we would discuss our mutual love of the Texas Longhorns. He was always kind to me and any of my family who were visiting. He sincerely cared about everyone. I will miss him but am thankful to have crossed paths with such a lovely soul in his last months on earth. May God comfort you in your grief.
